How to Turn Doorstep Interest Into Booked Pest Jobs

A practical door-to-door guide to serviceable routes, better questions and reliable follow-up.

THE ROUTE / THE CONVERSATION / THE HANDOFF

A FIELD GUIDE FOR PEST CONTROL OPERATORS

From the porch to the schedule

A good conversation creates interest. A clear next step turns that interest into work the office can act on.

No owner

The homeowner expects a reply, but no one is responsible for it.

No deadline

A vague promise to call tomorrow can sit for days.

No context

The office starts the conversation over before it can estimate or schedule.

A FIELD LEAD IS A PROMISE, NOT JUST A NAME.

Put a number on the handoff gap

This example is hypothetical. Replace the inputs with your own records before using it to make a business decision.

40%
illustrative booking rate

5 x 40% = 2 potential bookings at risk

The calculation shows exposure, not a promised result. Follow-up quality and booking rates vary by team.

Plan a route your team can service

The best doorstep opportunity still has to fit your service area, schedule and promise to the customer.

SAMPLE: ONE CLUSTER / ONE OFFER / ONE CALLBACK DEADLINE

1. Work a serviceable pocket

Choose nearby streets that a technician can reach promptly.

2. Make one honest offer

Know which inspection or estimate the office can arrange.

3. Define a qualified lead

Capture pest concern, address, contact permission and timing.

4. Name the follow-up owner

Set who calls back and the latest time for that call.

A tighter cluster can mean less drive time between future jobs.

A doorstep script that earns permission

Ask first. Learn the concern. Agree on the next step before you leave.

OPEN	Hi, I'm [name] with [company]. We serve homes in this area.
ASK	Any pest issue you'd want a professional to look at?
CLARIFY	Where are you seeing it? How soon do you want help?
AGREE	Can we call you at [time] about an estimate?

BEFORE LEAVING: RECORD THE HOMEOWNER'S WORDS AND THE EXACT NEXT ACTION.

A record the office can use

Can the next person act without asking the homeowner to repeat the story?

FILLED EXAMPLE | FICTIONAL

Concern	Ants in kitchen; noticed this week
Property	Service address recorded
Contact	Mobile number; text permission given
Promise	Estimate call tomorrow at 10 a.m.
Owner	Maya, office team
Status	Follow up

THE HANDOFF TEST

01 Can the office contact them?

02 Can it explain the concern?

03 Can it keep the promised next step?

A complete record preserves the concern, consent and commitment.

YOUR 15-MINUTE AUDIT

Make every knock traceable

Pick the last 10 interested households. Follow each one from doorstep conversation to callback, estimate and booking.

01 Select 10 recent interested households.

02 Trace each to its next action and result.

03 Mark missing owners, times or notes.

04 Fix one repeated break before the next route.

Keep four rates: next-action coverage, on-time follow-up, estimates and bookings.
